Artist's Home at Litchfield, Conn., Built Around Tree

Alexander T. Van Laer Saved an Old Elm on Homesite.

LITCHFIELD, Conn., July 1.—In the heart of Litchfield, Conn., at the head of picturesque West Hill, stands Laer-court Lodge, conservatively designed and substantially constructed. The lodge is the home of the late Alexander T. Van Laer of New York city, a noted landscape artist of the Dutch school and a member of the National Academy. Quaint and pleasing to the eye is the house, which is stuccoed in a warm buff and is green blinded. Of interest is the fact that it is built around a magnificent clm, which stands in the middle of a courtyard bedecked with periwinkles and violets.

courtyard bedecked with periwinkles and violets.

Like Joyce Kilmer, Van Laer had a feeling of poetic intimacy for the noble old elm. To descerate its beauty by tearing it down would be a sacrilege. Yet how to build a home on the spot where its roots burrowed /. mether carth and its leafy arms ext-nded skyward became a problem. The artist in Van Laer subdued his practicality to his love of beauty and the tree remained "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The problem was solved by building the house around the old elm.

In the interior the atmosphere of Colonial quaintness is carried out. One finds rare old mahogany furniture, fine china, steel engravings, bits of pewter and many similar antiques.

Blending the Old and New.

The piece de resistance, however, is the late artist's studio, which has been transformed into a Colonial furnishing shop by Mrs. Van Laer. The predominating note of the shop is Colonial, yet one finds a union of past and present in its contents. Flamboyant flarner dolls nestle in Chippendale chairs and gay bangles are found side by side with bits of antique brie-a-brac. Rows and rows of bottles, typifying the best examples of old American glass, stand as valiant exponents of a lost art.

Here and there is a highboy of solid construction and flawless finish. To one side one sees many quilted counterpanes resplendent with applique designs of gay color. Scarfs varying in tint from flame to orchid and from buff to amber introduce a modern note. The Orient and the Occident meet in piles of rugs from the Far East and those of the rag varlety, which were a delight to grandma's eye. There is no phase of interior decoration that appeals more vividly or romantically than quaint relics of the past Amid these early American antiques one almost pauses to listen to the footfail of a Colonial dame or the rustle of a brocaded gown.

of a Colonial dame of the rustic of brounded gown.
Several of the most notable land-scapes of the late artist adorn the walls. The beauty of these scenes seems to show the reflection of habit rather than the act of an artist consciously sitting down to paint. There is a subtlety of light and shade and an infinite delicacy of treatment predominating in these pastoral representations. High holiday tones of vernal green are blended with mauves, tans, pinks and grays by a union with long lengths of sunshine or the sparkle of snow.

This week end fluds Phelps's Tavern and Laercourt Lodge filled with guests, while many of the cottages near by are taking care of the overflow. Out at Bantom Lake, Holiday Farm and South View Inn have strained their accommodations to the utmost and disappointed week enders who were not foresighted enough to make reservations are putting up in nearby bearding houses or are enjoying a camping life on the shore of the lake. Deer Island has few unoccupied cottages.

"Dance and keep cool" is the system followed by patrons of the Belleclaire Towers, the new roof garden atop of the Hotel Belleclaire at Broadway and Seventy-seventh street.

Record breaking crowds have been the nightly order at the Hotel Astor Roof Garden since the opening early in June. A closeup of the gathering each evening demonstrates the fact that people from all parts of the world recognize the attractions of New York as a summer resort and even if they do not speak English they all appreciate the universal language of music as interpreted by Paul Specht and his symphonic orchestra.

A call to Europe has deprived the Knickerbocker Grill of the services of Constance Bennett, dancer, but in the meanwhile Geno Dabney and his Los Angeles Society Orchestra have arranged for special dance programs nightly.

The tea dances at Murray's Roman Gardens are becoming more popular every day, due no doubt to Tyler Brooke and Frank Farnum, who are delight-ing the patrons with their dancing.

As promising as its name, the Rainbow Inn at Rye Beach is at the end of a delightful motor ride from New York along the Boston Post Road. Overlooking the Sound and affording bathing, boating and fishing facilities, the Inn is an excellent place for shore dinners and dancing.

The Castles-by-the Sea at Long Beach opened on Thursday night under the direction and management of the Palais Royal and attracted a large gathering. In its new habiliments the great interior presents a beautiful Japanese garden, with a cascade of water flowing down over a mountain of rock into a small lake at the foot of the band pasoda. Paul Whitman's Collegians, an aggregation of young college musicians, won much applause for their "pep" and real musical ability.

The Fifteenth Regiment Band, N. Y. N. G., colored veterans of the world war, is giving an outdoor concert in the Sunken Garden of the Park Avenue Hotel every afterneon from 4 to 6 o'clock. This organization, under the leadership of Jim Europe, won the hearts of the people of France during the war. The idea of giving the concerts was originated by Col. Arthur Little, the Fifteenth's commanding of ficer. He wanted his musicians to have a regular engagement. The band is the rallying feature of the regiment and it is difficult to hold an organization, unless the little difficult to hold an organization will preside.
